Steps to Survival in Grief

Grief is the normal and natural response to losing someone or something. Each person's Grief Journey is different; vet there are some common concerns, pitfalls and approaches that all should recognize and

There is no universal roadmap for everyone's Grief Journey. Each of us must feel our way through the twists and turns of how we respond to and are affected by our own personal grief.

by Journey and if Journey and if Journey and if Journey and if Journey are some common concerns, it falls and proaches all should gnize and consider.

But it helps to be aware of some truisms about grief that apply to all of us so that we can feel empowered to express our grief, recognize flags that signal when caution is needed, and understand that we all have a right to need comfort and the freedom to look for and accept it.

Begin to Deal with the Sadness		Take Care of Yourself
Depression is normal after loss. Talking about your feelings with someone you trust can help.  It's Okay to feel Anger: Some get angry after loss. Channel it wisely, and it will go away as you heal. Hit a pillow. Yell and scream  It has happened Be with the Pain after loss is norm can return later to Give yourself time take. Don't jump in	•	<ul> <li>□ Take Good Care of You:         Get plenty of rest. Stick to a schedule.         Plan your days. Activity will give you         a sense of order.</li> <li>□ Seek Comfort:         Accept support from others – SEEK IT. It's         human and courageous.</li> <li>□ Surround Yourself With Living Things:         A new plant – bowl of fresh fruit – fresh flowers</li> <li>□ Reaffirm Your Beliefs:         Use your faith right now - explore it, lean on it.</li> </ul>
Consider Potential Pitfalls	Be Encouraged	GROW.  Be Gentle With Yourself:
<ul> <li>Keep Decision-Making to a Minimum:         Expect your judgment to be clouded for a while. You are going through change; don't add additional ones.</li> <li>Suicidal Thoughts:         These may arise − they are a symptom of pain. If you feel they are getting out of control, SEEK HELP AT ONCE.</li> <li>Beware of Addictive Activities:         Alcohol, drugs, food diversions can all momentarily help us escape from pain but NEVER help us to heal.</li> <li>Beware of the Rebound:         There is a HOLE. Be careful about rushing to fill it.</li> <li>You're Vulnerable:         Your resistance will be low − invite help from only those who are trustworthy.</li> </ul>	You are not Alone: Loss is part of life − EVERYBODY experiences it.  You're a Beautiful Worthwhile Person: You are much more than the emotional wound you are presently feeling.  Celebrate Your Survival: You're a richer, deeper, wiser person. Affirm your progress.  Tomorrow Will Come: Your life has been full of positive experiences − THEY WILL RETURN.	You have suffered a disabling emotional wound—treat yourself with care.  Keep a Journal: Putting your thoughts and feelings on paper is a good way to get them out. You can also look back and see just how far you have come  Mementos: If these are helpful to you, use them; BUT, if they bind you to a dead past, get rid of them. Before you say HELLO, you must say GOODBYI  Nutrition: Try to eat something nourishing every day. Good eating habits help the healing process.  Heal at Your Own Pace: Never compare yourself to another greiving person. Each of us has his/her own clock.
		Be Open:
Be Realistic In Your Expectations and Be Hopeful  Healing Has its Ups and Downs: Healing and growth is not a smooth upward progression, but full of ups and downs – dramatic leaps and depressing backslides.  Alone Does Not Mean Lonely: Solitude can be creative, restful, even fun. You can learn to enjoy it.  Set a Time Limit on Mourning: Remaining distraught for a long time is no proof that you really loved. Real love is LIFE SUPPORTING.  Begin to Look to the Future: Begin to experiment with new lifestyles – new ways of filling the day. They might even turn out to be fun.  Enjoy Your Freedom: You are now in control. Make the most of your choices – you can even learn to take risks.  Expect to Revisit Your Loss from Time to Time: There will always be things that trigger your sadness.		Give yourself opportunities to meet new people, go to new places and have new experiences. Small changes are best at first.  You Will Grow: As you work through your grief, you will learn that you CAN SURVIVE. The pain eventually lessens – healing does occur. You may begin to understand that change and separation are a natural part of living. You are a better person for having loved.
